Your success would surely save much money to patrons and a vast amount of labor to teachers. I heartily concur in your adoption of certain books of the "University Series," but wish to speak specially of Holmes' Readers. Your decision as regards them may be of great importance in moulding not only the minds but the morals of our youthful population. In the formation of new classes. I have gradually introduced ROBBERY.—ON last Sunday morning, some thief or thieves stole two hundred and sixty dollars from H. Davidson, keeper of the lower Red River Bridge. Mr Davidson left the money in the desk in the office, and walked up in the bridge for a few minutes, closing the door of the office after him. On returning, he found the window had been forced and entered and the money gone.

Up to this time no trace of the money has been found, the party or parties, having pone A NEAT JOB. It is to be hoped they will be caught and suits.
